Today's Students- Today's Entrepreneurs

Jacqueline J. Sullivan
Connector Contributor

Some of UMass Lowell's students are trying a different approach to hands-on experience and work study. They have found golden opportunities to put their education to the test. Students are starting their own businesses. Trying to earn a degree while being an entrepreneur seems like quite a difficult, if not impossible task. Will they succeed?

According to Dr. Braxton Hinchey, Professor of Marketing at UML, "A degree is not necessary to own a business, as long as you've learned about basic business principles someplace along the line."

Dr. Hinchey certainly advocates the idea of young people starting their own businesses. "Without entrepreneurs, the whole economy would eventually grind to a halt," he said. However, he advises that they take seriously the risks involved and exercise caution when considering this kind of enterprise.

"Because you have the capital or school experience and an idea that you fall in love with, you become blind to the reality of the marketplace," Dr. Hinchey stated. "Most businesses fail because they are undercapitalized or they are completely innocent of basic marketing principles."

In 1991 at age 19, Edward Smith, president of College Bound Movers, Inc., and a history major at UML, actually started his business with no capital. C.B.M., Inc. is a moving and storage company based in Lowell that began entirely out of hard work and muscles. "It was nothing more than a way to help pay for college. As I made more money, I was actually able to hire a few people and start renting trucks," Smith said.

Now C.B.M., Inc. is an established company with 17 employees and is listed weekly in Brad Street Financial Report. It has grown from monthly sales of $500 to a projected $49,000 this coming summer due to a recent contract with United Van Lines. Although he has been quite successful, Smith regrets that C.B.M., Inc. hinders his efforts in college.

I had to withdraw from school this past semester because things just got too hectic. It's hard trying to do two completely separate things at once," Smith said. "I definitely want to finish my degree. I don't want to have to decide between one or the other." Smith has re-enrolled and will be attending the 1995 Spring semester at UMass Lowell.

Kenneth Bushnell, owner of Bushnell Landscaping, has a similar problem concerning his college education. "It ended school for me. I didn't have the time to do both. I tried taking night classes, but even that was too much," Bushnell said. Currently, his college career is on hold.

Bushnell, 23, started his Chelmsford-based landscaping company five years ago and between seasons he makes income from snow removal ser-

Teaching Excellence Award

Lisa Schurga
Connector Contributor

This year the Student Government Association is giving the student body a chance to nominate their favorite professor for a teaching excellence award.

Julie Thomas, president of SGA came up with the idea for the teaching awards. She thought it would be a great way to show appreciation for some of the outstanding faculty at our University.

The nominations forms are located in all the Student Information Centers and in most departmental offices. Julie would like to choose the "winning" teachers by department but is afraid that there won't be enough nominations. Most likely, awards will be given out by colleges. If an award is between two teachers, the Executive Committee will be the decide.

The certificates will be given to the teachers at the Who's Who Banquet on April 2nd. The teachers names will also be listed in the Lowell Sun. Julie hopes this will be the start of a great tradition. She says, "I want these awards to carry a lot of prestige."

No parking on Broadway

Lowell Police issue mystery tickets to students

Lisa Schurga
Connector Contributor

For the past two weeks, unknowing students have been ticketed on Broadway Street in front of Coburn and Mahoney Hall. According to the City of Lowell Police, between December 1st and March 31st there is supposed to be no parking on Broadway Street. The City of Lowell Police were surprised when told that there are no signs to warn students of this rule.

A sergeant at the Lowell Police Department stated, "between the dates of December 1st and March 31st there is no parking between 2AM and 6AM on Broadway."

The sergeant's statement didn't explain why a great number of students are being fined during the day.

Kerrie Belluardo, a junior, has been ticketed twice now. The first time she was fined $10 and the second $5. Kerrie says, "I had no idea what I did wrong. Every car parked on the side of the road had a ticket on it. It doesn't seem fair that there is no warning."

Officers at the Lowell Police Department didn't know why these students were ticketed either. When asked, an anonymous officer said, "uhhh, I don't know."

He went on to say, "Well you know, the students got that new, big parking lot and they still park on the side of Broadway. They don't have to park there anymore."

The point is though, that if there is no sign to tell students that they can't park on Broadway, why shouldn't they? The police said they would probably try to put some kind of sign up but as soon as they do, the sign gets stolen.

Another place where students have to beware is on University Avenue between Riverside and VFW. Lowell Police say many students and teachers park in the travel lane and they are not going to take it anymore. From now on, the police are going to tow, without warning, every car parked in this section. They are going to send officers down there three times a day and if they find cars in the travel lane, they will immediately be carted away.

It seems that there is no where safe to park on the streets of Lowell. Students and teachers would be smart to park in the parking lots. If a student has received a ticket on Broadway Street, don't hesitate to call the Lowell Police because they probably don't even know why they issued it.

Now hiring: Director of Technology

Michelle Ross
Connector Staff

Plans are in the works to find a new Director of Technology Transfer who will organize an office of research in scientific and technical fields at UML. This will eventually lead to new discoveries, inventions, and processes.

The new director will help promote the transfer of UML technology to the market. "The whole idea is to make commercial use of inventions as a result of faculty and student research," says Aldo Crugnola, Dean of Engineering. "In the past, we haven't had an outlet for these kinds of things. Until now, we have developed our own inventions independent from industry." Hopefully, the University will be able to form partnerships with industries which could result in part- ownership of a company. However, the legal aspects have yet to be worked out. "One of our missions is to promote economic well-being in the state as well," says Crugnola.

The new director must have extensive knowledge of marketing and finance skills along with science and technology experience. He or she will expand UML's relationship with industry and find appropriate markets for its discoveries. The Director must have excellent written and oral skills and a commitment to reaching the goals set by the program. He or she will educate UML faculty on ways to protect their ideas through patents and copyrights. The new director will also represent UML at professional events and open up channels of communication with other universities as well as create support through technology transfer and business assistance organizations.

One of the projects the new director will be working on is Impact, a laboratory incubator in the University. UML is planning to acquire space in the Wannalancit Building to expand the project. "Companies that are just starting out could come in and rent space," says Crugnola. "They could make use of the equipment until they got on their feet."

A 15- person search committee has been established to recruit the most qualified individual for the position. It will be coordinated through President Hooker's office.

SLOWLY GROWING APATHETIC

Philip J. Kelnhofer

For a long time I used to think of SGA as nothing but a group of kids trying to improve their résumés. Now I see them as people truly learning how to be politicians. They must have studied our congressmen, governors, and presidents to have learned the three important lessons of being the consummate politician.

Lesson one: More talk, less rock. This lesson is essential to any sort of political campaign. All one has to do is talk the talk don't worry what happens after you get elected. We, as a nation, have been burned enough times that we shouldn't get fooled by fancy speeches, but, alas, "Read my lips, no new taxes," still worked. In fact, telling the truth gets you into trouble. A Congressman who says we have to cut entitlements has a million special interests after them.

Here at UMass Lowell the technique is the same. A few years ago (when all the hubbub about gays in the military was going on) I remember Matt Drouin (now the Class of 95 President) actually setting a date when ROTC would be removed from the campus. However, when I walk down the light blue halls of the third floor of Southwick I still see their offices.

This is not SGA's only failed attempt at trying to change UMass Lowell for the "better." Remember the attempt at keeping the arena on campus. Now, if it is ever built, not only will it not be on campus but it will be more the City's than ours. A separate Rec-Center will be built near Fox Hall for the Students.

Lesson Two: Take credit where credit isn't due. (Corollary: I didn't do it.) A politician must remember if good things happen they are responsible and when things go wrong they weren't there.

Clinton got elected, the economy improved therefore Clinton's was responsible for the economy's improvement. The economy worsened Clinton was already in office, but this time old policies were to blame.

Here at UMass Lowell SGA "fought" the administration over parking problems. Later, the school acquired the Vulkor Lot. Therefore, SGA is to thank for the new parking spaces - Q.E.D.

The bookstore is the same story. SGA campaigned to keep the bookstore on campus and it stayed, but does that mean SGA had anything to do with it? Probably not. In actuality Barnes & Noble realized that with no other businesses moving into the Bon Marche Building in downtown Lowell, it would have been a bad business decision.

Lesson Three: With power comes power. One of the things that is destroying our national government is the little perks that politicians get. By being coddled and carted around to $500 a plate dinners, they quickly lose touch with the majority of the population.

When our SGA members finally get elected, they quickly learn that there can be little perks right here at UML. Look at the list of Who's Who for this semester and count the members of SGA on the list. It must be nice to be on the committee who decides which students qualify.

Go visit the SGA offices and enjoy there freshly painted walls and new curtains. Meanwhile other clubs, such as the Connector's offices are falling apart. While SGA works in a palace, the Connector's drop ceiling is half-missing, the curtains are disintegrating, paint is peeling off the walls, and computers are still broken thanks to faulty air conditioner two years ago that still hasn't been replaced.

So next time you see a member of SGA, don't sneer at them as they are useless bureaucrats. They are just doing their job.

The opinions above are mine. You may agree if you wish. The Connector is an inanimate object and, therefore, incapable of forming opinions. I, on the other hand, am a human being and, thus, given to that sort of behavior.

Women's Studies Brown Bag Lunch Discussion in November

Tracy Cutter
Connector Contributor

Tracy Cutter discussed the effects of women's studies courses on student attitudes as part of the Women's Studies Brown Bag Lunch Series. Ms. Cutter, a graduate student in the Community and Social Psychology program, conducted research on women's studies courses at UMass Lowell in the Spring semester of 1994 for her Master's Thesis. The talk, entitled "Assessing the Impact of Women's Studies Courses on Students at UMass Lowell," was held in McGauvran on South Campus in early November.

The research study investigated the effects that women's studies courses at UMass Lowell had on student attitudes toward women and their feminist identity development. For example, did the attitudes of students enrolled in women's studies courses change significantly over the semester? Did the women's studies students internalize a more feminist identity at the end of the course than at the beginning? Did the courses affect men and women differently? These were key questions of this project.

After briefly reviewing some of the literature on this topic, Ms. Cutter described the methodology and results of her study. A questionnaire was administered to students in four women's studies and four non-women's studies courses at UMass Lowell during the first and last two weeks of classes. The questionnaire was designed to measure attitudes toward women and the development of a feminist identity.

Some significant differences from pretest to posttest were found. The attitudes of the women students became more egalitarian after taking a women's studies course. The men became significantly more committed to action on behalf of women after taking a women's studies course, whereas the men in the control courses became significantly less committed to action on behalf of women from pretest to posttest. The results suggest that women's studies courses do affect student attitudes. Significant differences were also found between men and women in several areas. For example, the women had more egalitarian attitudes than did the men overall, and only the men experienced significant change over the semester in regard to their commitment to action on behalf of women. This study explored an avenue for changing people's views about women in our society. Significant, positive changes were found for at least some of the measures used in this research.

This study was completed under the supervision of thesis advisor, Dr. Anne Mulvey, and thesis committee members, Dr. Charlotte Mandell and Dr. Kathleen Hulbert. Ms. Cutter wishes to thank the professors and students who participated in this research. Any questions or comments about this study should be directed to Tracy Cutter in Psychology at Mahoney Hall, South Campus. Questions or comments about the Women's Studies Brown Bag Lunch Series should be directed to Anne Mulvey, Coordinator of Women's Studies at (508) 934-3965.

vices. He was enrolled in the Criminal Justice program at UML and hopes to return to complete his degree. For now, Bushnell is concentrating on the growth of his business and enjoying a steady sales increase of 10% annually.

What has he gained from this experience? "You learn a lot about yourself. I thrive on it, and I know I'll never work for anyone else again."

Although encouraging, these business success stories are a one-sided view of the whole picture. Stacie Resendes, UML marketing graduate, enjoyed less fleeting prosperity in her entrepreneurial endeavor. A member of an engineering start-up company called Dyer Systems, Inc., she was forced to leave the venture, heartbroken, in search of work elsewhere.

"I hated leaving. It was like divorcing my parents. We were like a very involved emotional family," Resendes said.

Resendes took on many responsibilities at the small, specialized operation, performing such tasks as the capital layout,

"When you're dealing with the high-tech industry, you need qualified engineers with qualified business persons who can come to an agreement. We didn't have that," Resendes said.

Put bluntly, in the business world you either sink or swim. Most fail while others succeed. It takes perseverance, business smarts and unfaltering nerve to own a business. The effort and risk involved can be overwhelming. Obviously, being an entrepreneur can be quite difficult and time-consuming, especially for those who are simultaneously attempting to earn a college degree.

Dr. Hinchey gave some noteworthy advice to young entrepreneurs. "Try to establish a relationship with an older person that will invest money into your idea. It can be quite a significant learning experience," he said. However, he also stressed the importance of a college education. Dr. Hinchey counsels, "Spend the time it takes for you to earn a degree. There is no conceivable way to not benefit from an education."

"You learn a lot about yourself. I thrive on it, and I know I'll never work for anyone else again."

marketing plan and public relations. But the product line was small, its life cycle already in decline. The company was getting killed competitively, and capital was essentially non-existent. Resendes loved the business and her partners, but she realized that failure was inevitable.

Stolen Mercury Leads to Dorm Evacuation

Boca Raton, Fla. - The mercury has been going down in southern Florida, but it has nothing to do with colder temperatures.

More than 180 students at Florida Atlantic University were temporarily moved out of their dorm hall after school officials found small mercury spills in 15 separate rooms.

The students were given emergency physicals and blood and urine tests to determine whether or not they have been exposed to the toxic metal. If a high level of mercury is inhaled, it can cause neurological ailments and liver disease.

The bulk of the mercury was found in Seminole Hall, which houses 185 students, the dorm was completely evacuated on Saturday, Nov. 26, after students reported seeing traces of the shiny substance on the balcony. Soon after, local health officials detected mercury throughout the dorm.

Campus police found a plastic bottle filled with mercury in the room of two female students, who are currently being questioned. Earlier in the week, researchers at the school's physics lab reported that four pounds of mercury were missing.

FAU police say most of the missing mercury has been discovered. In addition to the dorm rooms, they found the substance in the science building and near an outdoor pond.

Until Seminole Hall is cleared for residents' use by the health department, which officials say may take several weeks, students are staying at the Boca Raton Sheraton at a cost of $5,000 per day to the university.

N.C. State U. Prof Studies Cockroaches

Raleigh, N.C. - At first, the laboratory of North Carolina State University's Dr. Coby Schal may sound like an exterminator's nightmare.

Schal's laboratory is home to 2 million cockroaches.

But the containers of critters are an integral part of Schal's research, which is understanding and devising methods to control cockroaches.

Schal and the technicians and students who work in his lab are pursuing cockroach control on several fronts, including studying pheromones and hormones created by the insects.

Insects often use pheromones-chemical signals-to attract members of the opposite sex. Schal has been isolating cockroaches' pheromones to use against them. Pheromone-laced traps could be used both mass trapping of roaches and to measure levels of infestation, he said.

Schal and his students also are studying the astounding ability cockroaches have to develop resistance to insecticides. A portion of the lab is reserved for roaches that are resistant to different insecticides.

The cockroaches that are typically found in homes and restaurants have a "very diverse genome," Schal said. That means that no matter how lethal the substance to which a population is exposed, it is likely that some will develop resistance and survive.

To make sure what happens in the lab is an accurate reflection of what is going on in the real world, Schal's students are conducting insecticide and diet tests in apartments owned by the Raleigh Housing Authority.

Employers Project Increase in Hiring, Campus Visits

Bethlehem, Penn.—Employers plan to hire more college graduates this year than they did last year, according to a recent survey by the College Placement Council.

Overall, respondents project hiring 4.2 percent more graduates in 1994-95 than they actually hired in 1993-94.

And there's more good news: a slightly higher number of employers plan on recruiting for job candidates at college and university campuses they will visit, while 40 percent plan to maintain the same number of scheduled visits as last year. Only 23 percent of the employers plan to visit fewer campuses this year.

The net effect: Employers plan to visit 1.2 percent more campuses in the 1994-95 recruiting season than they visited last year.

Starting salaries are expected to increase modestly this year. Employers plan to increase starting salaries to their new entry-level hires an overall average of 2.8 percent this year. Manufacturing employers plan to increase starting salaries to their new hires by 2.9 percent, services employers plan to increase starting salaries by 2.7 percent and government and nonprofit employers plan to increase starting salaries 2.4 percent this year.

The "Job Outlook '95" report is based upon a survey of 227 employers conducted by College Placement Council, Inc.

Classes Around The Clock

Oklahoma City- Tired of having out at 7-1 until two in the morning? Sick of watching Nick at Nite? Then head to the classroom.

School officials at Oklahoma City Community College have announced plans to offer courses 24 hours a day beginning in January.

"What is nighttime to one person is daytime to another," said Dr. Bobby Gaines, president of the college. "There's a population out there that needs an extra opportunity to excel. I believe this project will meet some of those needs."

According to Gaines, Oklahoma City has a wide range of shift employees working for AT&T, the Federal Aviation Administration and United Parcel Service who aren't able to attend classes that are offered at conventional times.

Initially, Gaines says, OCCC will schedule 12 courses beginning shortly after midnight to help serve those workers and others who want to earn an associates degree or upgrade their job skills. The late-night courses will focus on business, healthcare, and computer science. But if the classes fill up and students show an interest," Gaines said, "we'll consider expanding the schedule."

OCCC is believed to be the first institution to offer classes around the clock.

Available Scholarships at the Office of Minority Student Affairs

There are two scholarships for minority students who are considering a career in teaching. UMass Lowell is a member of a consortium which sponsors the Institute for the Recruitment of Teacher (IRT), a 4-week summer program at Phillips Academy in Andover, MA. The IRT is offering scholarships to selected minority students, currently in their Junior year, who are interested in teaching at the High School or University level. Eligibility is open to African-American, Latino, and Native American students in good academic standing. Recipients will receive a $1,000 stipend, travel expenses, and room and board. For their participation in the 4-week program in July 1995, the students will also receive counseling and assistance when applying to graduate school.

For additional information about this scholarship, please contact Suzanne Gamache, ext. 4336, at the Office of Minority Student Affairs in Room 336 McGauvran on South Campus or Arnaldo Mejias, ext. 2219 at the Office of Academic Affairs on North Campus in Cumnock. The deadline for applications is April 15, 1995.

In addition, the Office of Minority Student Affairs has information about job postings, internships, scholarships, and graduate programs from numerous universities in the US. These programs are targeted for students of color. Our hours are Monday-Friday, 9 to 5. Please drop by for additional information, we look forward to meeting you.

Scholarships Available The Psychology Department

Scholarships of $2,500 for qualified students to train in autism, and the opportunity for early admission into a Graduate Program in Counseling Psychology, Rehabilitation, and Special Education. Preference will be given to minority students but all may apply.

$5,000 stipend for those who pursue graduate training.

For more information and an application please contact Dr. Mandell, Psychology Department Chair, at Mahoney 110 ext. 3954 or drop by the Psychology Advising Center Mahoney 1 Monday through Thursday 10a.m. to 1p.m.

Wellness Tips

Fact: Skipping meals or depriving yourself of food when you're hungry actually promotes the storage of fat.

Student Body Basics

- Keep a few breakfast items in your room, such as bagels, cereals, and fresh fruit.
- Choose the "bag lunch" option in the cafeteria when you don't have time to sit down and eat.
- If you don't have time for lunch at all, work two snacks in between breakfast and dinner, such as fresh fruit, low-fat crackers, rice cakes, no-fat yogurt, bagels, or pita bread.
- Make a microwave dinner.

Remember: The overwhelming scientific research to date shows that the most likely result of erratic eating and meal-skipping is that you'll get fatter!

Fat In Your Food-

How much is the right amount for you? Here Is The Formula - Take your bodyweight and divide by four. For example: If you weigh 130 pounds, $130/4 = 32.5$ grams of fat per day. (If you are athletic or very active, you may add another 10-15 grams of fat per day.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Open Letter to University Student Body

It was in the fall 1992 semester when I took the job of being vice-president of the UMass Lowell Karate Club. At the time, ULowell was still getting used to the term "UMass Lowell", I had just changed my major, and during the summer I had started what soon came to be one of the many loves of my life, Shotokan karate. I found out about this club, not through flyers or word of student mouth, but rather through my home dojo, learning that a former student of that establishment was teaching here at the university. Not knowing what to expect, I got my unwitting self down to Mahoney gym, just in time to witness a multi-talented cast and crew put on a spectacular demonstration of karate technique. I was definitely hooked, seeing what I could do, and what I could accomplish if I set my mind to it. It was then I began my journey down the well-trodden path of ULowell (ah, UMass Lowell!!) Karate history.

Those were definitely "the good old days"! You see, as with any organized college sport team, there are building seasons, where all new members are involved, and not many (if any at all) experienced talent remains. Then there are, for lack of a better analogy, "built" seasons, where the team is stacked with the best and the brightest, with some new talent thrown in for excitement and vigor, but for the most part consists of a solid advanced group who can (literally), kick ass and take names. These were the days of Kaz, Bjedni (still can't spell that right), Mike Walsh and "Chelsea", along with many others who carved ULowell a permanent niche in the annals of the N.E.C.K.C. (the college karate organization under which we are organized). This legacy ended with our definitive victory at the 1993 Boston Asian Festival, were a good time, and First place in all events, were had by all from this university.

Alas, all good things must end, and so our legacy faded. Most of the team graduated, and others did not continue. I became president in the beginning of the spring of 1993, not because I was voted into office, but because there was no one left to be president! Its somewhat scary what graduating can do to a college team/club. I knew that the club now had an almost undefeatable enemy it had to face in order to survive. Not Chuck Norris, Steve Seagal or Bruce Lee, but a more formidable enemy, known very well at this university, called apathy. I knew I would have to make this club special in order to rebuild it to its former state of grace and power. At first I tried this alone, with some success, later realizing that running a club is impossible without the help of others along the way, like myself in their desire to see a success story continue. People such as Matt Ezzo, Chuck Grey, Scott Kimbell, Mary Sullivan, Vin Donald, and Tham Tran (to name a few), helped me to keep the club alive through the especially hard times. Instructors such as John Nofle, John Murphy and Richard Sheehan instilled in my officers, myself, and all of our members a spirit for which there can be no comparison; the spirit to continue on, no matter what the odds. As for how well I continued the legacy; well, that's not for me to decide, but I think I did all right.

I'm writing the letter, not only as a good-bye, but rather as a dedication to all those who have helped me run this club, whether you did it by joining, by words of encouragement, or by just passing out a flyer. I want to thank everyone for whatever help they afforded myself and to this club. Without the efforts you all supplied, the club may not have survived the hard times (and, as mentioned earlier, there were plenty of those!).

As with most history, the cycle unique to this club is repeating itself. Due to an exceptional internship opportunity, I can no longer continue to be the president of this club, and due to the fact that this is also many of my officer's last semester, most of them cannot continue in their capacities, as well. The club is in dire straights as of this writing, with our instructors status in jeopardy, and a mass "graduation exodus" of all the officers. I cannot even oversee the implementation of new officers, as my schedule is completely full. So I am asking you for help. If you have ever had an interest in the martial arts, I implore you to seize this great opportunity to join a club that teaches ;you something you can use in "real" life, and to possibly have a controlling voice in the operations of this club. There are officer spots open, and plenty of room for new members with good, solid ideas. There are some experienced members left, enough to give good advice and to show newcomers the basics of the art of Shotokan karate. This club is at a point in its history that it needs new leaders, and needs new life. Those who join learn, advance, promote, fight and succeed. I assure you, karate is like nothing else you have experienced before, both mentally and physically. Stay with it, and if you decide to join, and I guarantee you will not be disappointed. Who knows? You may find yourself president next semester, by default, under the same conditions I did, some time ago.

With that, I bid ;you farewell. The membership status and enrollment status of the club is unknown to me at this time (remember what I said about my schedule?). However, what is left of my gung-ho staff is still kicking around somewhere. Her name is Melissa, and she has been one hell of a vice president. If you leave a note for her in Fox room 528, the one with the giant symbol of our sport on the wall, you more than likely will get a response, telling you all that you need to know. Good luck with your semesters, and your school careers. See you at graduation (if I can get time off of work).... Sincerely

-Daniel Rey Ochoa

They're anything but Jerky

Johnnie B. & Kamal are just two nice guys riding the wave of fun

Connector Staff

For those who don't know, previously anonymous Johnnie B. and Kamal (a.k.a. The Jerky Boys) are two men from New York who prank call businesses and, utilizing their talents of alternate identities, annoy the hell out of anyone who'll stay on the line long enough. With their two self-titled albums (the 2nd of the two has been nominated for a Grammy this year in the "Best Comedy Album" category), The Jerky Boys have gathered a substantial college cult following, primarily in the Northeast.

Now, The Jerky Boys are dropping their "in cognition" and debuting their own selves in The Jerky Boys: The Movie; they were recently in Boston, their first stop on a ten-city tour of the U.S. to promote this movie. The College Press-only conference was held recently at the Sonsie Cafe on Newbury Street, where reporters (I included) from about 20 area colleges filled the small conference room downstairs. Johnnie B. and Kamal arrived fashionably late, and as hard as it is to believe, they were your average, normal-looking guys from New York (though Kamal had a Johnny Carson-"Carnac"-like turban and cape on over his New York jersey).

First of all, you might wonder how the Jerky Boys got their name; Johnnie B. answered lovingly, "You know, true story—my mom, she gave us the name when we were trying to think of a name for the first album...we were throwing out all sorts of ideas, like The Automechanics, The Bootleg...but my mom was just doing the dishes when she said, "Why don't you just call yourselves the fing 'Jerky Boys'?" Just like that, you know. As soon as she said that, we were like, holy shit, that's it." They've been doing this kind of Jerky-work for a while (since 1986/87), but Kamal tries to retrace exactly how their publicity came about:

"What happened was...like, all the classic originals you heard, all the stuff you probably heard when you were in school, that stuff I gave to one guy, and that one guy made copies of it...six months later I was in a bar and the people sitting next to me were laughing about something and they said, "Then the guy says "I'll wrack yer head in with a ratchet"...So that's how it went through, you know, people in colleges just passing it around to their friends or whatever."

As said, The Jerky Boys weren't always candid about their true identities; but, when they started a 900-number, they valiantly (and rather unsuccessfully) tried to reveal that it was they who were behind the hilarious voices of Tarbash the Indian Magician and the abrasive Frank Rizzo. "So many people started saying, "Yeah, that's my roommate down the,

you know, this is him man...but when they meet us, it's like, "C'mon, get outta here," Kamal told us. Johnnie B. added that, "I said it once and they didn't believe me so I never said it again. they tracked us down through the phone line, so they knew it was the real thing...we even did a voice analysis test because so many people, including big-name radio hosts were saying they were us. That's part of the reason that we decided to come out, make a business out of it. It's for a good laugh, and all these people were doing terrible, terrible imitations of us." Their material is entirely spontaneous, as Kamal described that "I'll say [to Johnnie] "Dial 254-6—." He'll dial and I'll say, "Alright, it's a...medical center." Whenever we think too far ahead, it just doesn't work as well."

Kamal claims that Tony Danza (yes, of "Who's the Boss?" fame) had first approached them with the idea for a movie: "What happened was, they came to us...Hollywood—actually, Tony Danza called up the people who were affiliated with us and said, "I see a movie with you guys...so then the people that he tried to hook us up with didn't see the movie, but Caravan [the movie company that is releasing JB:M] did...they have big distribution, and they're only one of two American movie people...Disney wanted us...there was an independent movie studio who wanted us, but it involved too much cream and oil [referring to the independents who put out pornos]."

The movie itself is semi-biographical, in that there are these two guys making prank calls and using different voices; however, in the movie the two men get into some pretty heavy trouble with the mob. The true life JB's have had some legal problems in the past with their strange calling habits, but now they have strict rules for what they do: they never do repeated calls to one number, they never call homes, and they always get the "victim" to sign a release form before they even consider putting the recorded call on an album. They do feel remorse for some of the calls they've made, right? Wrong. Johnnie B. shook his head and said (amongst laughter), "I feel very hurt sometimes. I sob...naw, we don't give a shit." Kamal figures it like this: "It's that we call businesses...like, if you received a call like that at work, you wouldn't take it personally. When you call a person at his home and scare 'em, that's when I feel bad. But we never do that."

The strangely creative minds who came up with this marketing idea are packaged underneath such ordinary personas, so in regards to the oddity of some of their skits and responses, I had to ask what was the strangest response they've ever received from someone that they'd called, Kamal's reply being: "I dunno about Johnnie, but one time I called an operator and she said, "I know who you are, you're the Jerky Boys," or,"Pssh, yeah, who do these guys think they are—the Jerky Boys?" The JB's honestly do not know exactly where this venture will take them, nor do they care: "I don't give a shit man...this is great now, it's like a wave and we're just riding it..." Johnnie B. said poignantly. Kamal responded with an equally firm but uncertain answer: "I'm a bass player, and I love to play music, but um...I'll probably go back to shucking clams."

Perhaps, if their movie goes on to receive better reviews than the recent critically panned Dumb and Dumber (though it would be nice if JB:M grossed as much money and publicity), Kamal won't have to worry about shucking clams, and Johnnie B. won't have to do any more construction work.

Stay tuned to the follow-up article, which will contain a review of The Jerky Boys: The Movie Original Motion Picture Soundtrack, which features JB's Tom Jones performing Lenny Kravitz's "Are You Gonna Go My Way," and others.

Four alternative comics reviewed

by Daniel DiCenso
Connector Staff

I've noticed a large amount of articles recommending certain comic books for diverse reading. Based on this, I now throw my proverbial hat into the ring by suggesting my own favorite comics for those bored with "normal" comic titles.

Bone: Art and story by Jeff Smith. If you've haven't already checked out the adventures of Fone Bone and his cousins Smiley and Phoney along with their many friends and enemies, you're missing out on one of the best independent comics in a long time. Smith's simple pen and ink cartoon style goes well with his combination of humor and fantasy adventure.

Savage Henry and Those Annoying Post Bros: Art and story by Matt Howarth. For truly insane science fantasy/violent humor, you can't go wrong with the residents of Bugtown, an interdimensional city where anarchy is the rule, electronic rock the music of choice and every Bugtown born person has the ability of "reality shifting" (interdimensional teleportation). Ron and Russ Post are the ultimate anti-heroes, causing (and getting into) trouble all across the multiverse. Savage Henry is the lead guitarist of the Bulldaggers (Bugtown's #1 rock group), also consisting of his girlfriend Caroline (A clone on keyboards), Monsieur Boche (Scheming Samoan synthesist), Conrad Schnitzler (Real life German synthesist) and H.P. Lovecraft's monster C'thulu as their road manger! Howarth's wild pen styles and guest appearances by real electronic musicians make these two comics worth a peek.

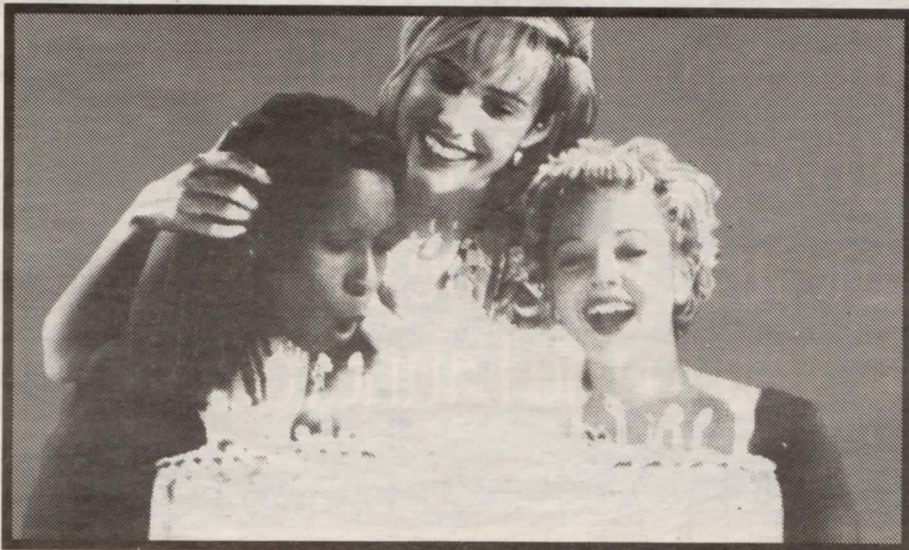

Jink: Art by David Boller. Story by Wendy Pini and John Ostrander. This comic is published by WaRP Graphics, the creators of Elfquest and is set 1000 years after the events of the EQ title Shards. The world of Abode is now a high tech human populated world that faced war 40 years ago with an insect race called the Never-ending. A mysterious woman named Jink stopped them with her psychic abilities. Now she's needed again, but she doesn't want the job. She may also be a descendent of Abode's vanished (not extinct) race, the elves. I won't reveal more but I will say that Boller's art is excellent and Pini and Ostrander work together well on the story.

The Rebels Art by Delfin Barral. Story by Bern Harkins. Set at the same time as Jink and based on a comic created by Wendy Pini in the 60's, the Rebels consist of Cosmo, a cadet of Skyward (Abode's starfleet), Scorch, his hot headed buddy, Chandra, a female student from an ice world colony, Shimmer, a cyborg, and Rosie, a half human/ half Preserver (An important creature in the EQ saga) humanoid. They're on the run for saving Shimmer and Rosie from a government lab and stealing a prototype starship and a mysterious elfin artifact. Barral's Japanese inspired artwork fits with Harkins' fast paced story. Both Jink and the Rebels will crossover into each other at a later time.

Understanding The Opposite Sex

A coed group meeting with guidance from a counselor from the Counseling Center to explore questions like: Can a woman understand what it is like to be a man, what pressures fears and longings he has? Can a man understand a woman's experience, what she needs from a relationship? Why do men and women often seem to be speaking different languages?

BUY AN APPLE MACINTOSH NOW. PAY FOR IT LATER.*

We're not just making it easier for you to buy a Macintosh, we're making it easier for you to buy something else you really need—time. Because for a limited time, with the Apple Computer Loan and 90-Day Deferred Payment Plan, you can own a Macintosh personal computer, printer, CD-ROM drive or other peripheral without making a single payment for 90 days. Combine that with no hassles, no complicated forms and already great student pricing, and the easy-to-use Macintosh is now incredibly easy to buy. The Apple Computer Loan and 90-Day Deferred Payment Plan. The solution that gives you the power every student needs. The power to be your best.*

UMass Lowell Bookstore
Computer Store/934-APPLE (2775)

*Prices above do not include tax.

*Deferred Apple Computer Loan offer expires February 17, 1995. No payment of interest or principal will be required for 90 days. (Some resellers may require a deposit to hold merchandise while loan is being approved.) Interest accruing during this 90-day period will be added to principal, and the principal amount, as so increased, will thereafter bear interest which will be included in the repayment schedule. *Monthly payment is an estimate based on the following information. For the Performa® 475 system shown here, a purchase price of $1,128.75, which includes 5% sales tax, including loan fees, the total loan amount is $1,194.44, which results in a monthly payment obligation of $21. For the Performa® 636 CD system shown here, a purchase price of $1,720.95, which includes 5% sales tax, including loan fees, the total loan amount is $1,821.11, which results in a monthly payment obligation of $30. For the Power Macintosh® 6100/60 CD system shown here, a purchase price of $2,157.75, which includes 5% sales tax, including loan fees, the total loan amount is $2,283.33, which results in a monthly payment obligation of $38. Computer system prices, loan amounts and sales taxes may vary. See your authorized Apple Campus Reseller or representative for current system prices, loan and tax amounts. Loans are for a minimum of $1,000 to a maximum of $10,000. You may take out more than one loan, but the total of all loans cannot exceed $10,000 annually. A 55% loan origination fee will be added to the requested loan amount. The interest rate is variable, based on the commercial paper rate plus 5.35%. For the month of November, 1994, the interest rate was 10.85% with an Annual Percentage Rate of 12.10%. 8-year loan term with no prepayment penalty. The monthly payment and the Annual Percentage Rate shown assume the 90-day deferral of principal and interest described above and no other deferral of principal or interest. Students may defer principal payments up to 4 years, or until graduation. Deferral will change your monthly payments. The Apple Computer Loan is subject to credit approval. Apple Computer Loan and 90-Day Deferred Payment Plan offers available only to qualifying students, faculty and staff. Offers available only from Apple or an authorized Apple Campus Reseller or representative. ©1994 Apple Computer, Inc. All rights reserved. Special Service and Super Supper (with a Methodist flavor) - February 5

The first Special Service and Super Supper of the spring semester is scheduled for the first Sunday in February, February 5, 1995. The Super Supper follows the Sunday evening Protestant worship service of Holy Communion held at 6:00 pm in Fox Hall, Room 301. If you haven't yet made it to one of our Super Suppers, the beginning of the semester might just be a good time to join us. In preparation for the service, you are invited to read Isaiah 6:1-13 and Luke 5:1-11. This month's service and supper are scheduled to have a "Methodist flavor" as the items will be prepared for us by members of West Chelmsford United Methodist Church. If you would like to be a part of this evening celebration, and/or if you need transportation, please call me at 934-5014, or leave a message at my office in Fox Hall, Room 608B

Protestant Campus Minister

* PSI CHI * PSI CHI * For Your Information

New Meeting Time

Psi Chi meetings for the Spring semester will be held in the Psych. lounge in Mahoney every Wednesday at 12:15 p.m. Please note the time change.

New Member Applications

Psi Chi is now accepting applications for new members to be inducted at our Induction Ceremony held on March 29, 1995. For further information and applications see any Psi Chi member or pick one up in the Psych. Office in Mahoney (Claire's office). Completed applications can be placed in the manila folder in the Psi Chi mailbox in the Psych. lounge. Deadline is Friday, February 24, 1995.

New Psi Chi Officers

All Psi Chi officer positions will be vacant for the '95-'96 school year. If you're interested in applying, or just want more information, leave a message in the Psi Chi mailbox in the Psych. lounge, along with a way to get in touch. If you're being inducted this year you're eligible to be an officer. Positions opening are: President, Vice President, Secretary, Treasurer.

Career Day - Feb. 22, 1995

Psychology Career Day is Wednesday, February 22, 1995. If you have any ideas or requests for specific featured information, please get in touch through the Psych. Office and we'll do our best to get someone qualified in that area. If you know someone in the field that would like the opportunity to speak, please let us know!

Psychology Student Research Journal

We are interested in starting a Student Research Journal. Have you done some interesting research? Are you particularly proud of a paper you've done and would like to share the information? If there's enough interest we'd like an inaugural issue completed for April 1995 distribution. Any interested Undergraduate or graduate student should contact us through the Psi Chi mailbox in the Psych. lounge.

Volunteer Opportunities

The American Psychological Association is sponsoring an exhibit at the Museum of Science in Boston entitled Psychology: Understanding Ourselves-Understanding Each Other. Psi Chi is hoping to sponsor a field trip to the museum sometime during its run (February 7 to April 28, 1995) for anyone interested. In the meantime, the Museum of Science is looking for volunteers to help with the exhibit who are willing to offer 4 hours per week for the entire run. Details on the available positions, along with the training schedule and registration information, are posted in the Psych. lounge and on the Psych. board outside the Psych. office. Interested Undergrad and Grad psych. majors welcome.

Men's Basketball drops close one to N.H.C.

Poor officiating and inconsistent play led to a 3-point loss to New Hampshire

Drew Poirier
Sports Writer

They should have won. It's that simple. Leading by 8 at the half, the River Hawks were victimized by sloppy play, poor decision making; and most importantly, horrendous officiating as they fell 63-60 to the New Hampshire college Penmen last Wednesday at Costello Gym.

Lowell came out flat to start the game and fell quickly behind 12-6. The game went back and forth with no team gaining control until the half-way mark of the first half when junior center Jeichael Henderson brought the home crowd to its feet with an emphatic reverse jam on a break-away. That play shifted momentum into Lowell's favor, as the River Hawk's picked up the pace and forged ahead to a 37-29 half-time lead. Junior forward Jarvis Murray out of Detroit Cody High School in Michigan led the hawks with six first half points.

The second half started off in much the same way the first half did, with New Hampshire College chopping away at the River Hawks lead before Lowell buckled down on defense and pushed the lead to a game high 10 points with 15 minutes left to play. That's when the ref's took over the game. It's understandable that an official might make one or two poor calls over the course of a 40-minute contest, after all they're only human, but the game was out of control. One of the main problems was that it appeared the ref's forgot how to count, or they would most definitely have called a 3-second foul on one of the many times a Penmen big-man set up camp in the paint. Also, the officials missed some big fouls committed against Lowell players late in the game that all but sealed the River Hawks fate. Jeichael Henderson, Spencer Staggs, and Zach Zegarowski each threw in nine points to lead the River Hawks well balanced offensive attack.

Although the game was poorly officiated, that isn't an excuse for the inconsistent play Lowell displayed on the court. Over the last 15 minutes of the game Lowell was plagued by poor shot selection, defensive lapses, and general mental breakdowns. Lowell has the talent to overcome poor officiating or inconsistent play, but overcoming both was a little more than the Hawks could handle on this night. Hopefully, Lowell can rebound from this loss and get back on the winning track for tomorrow night's NECC match-up with Keene State at Costello Gym at 7:30.
